Sunday Times biographical note:

"In his pre-teen prime, Danny Bonaduce played the red-headed smart alec in the long-running television series "The Partridge Family". When his voice broke, the show had no further use for him and he came to the crushing realisation that "being a child star does not prepare you for adult life - it doesn't even prepare you for childhood. I was qualified to do nothing. I could either be famous or a gas station attendant". He spent his accumulated $500,000 fortune on a potent cocktail of "drugs and cars and girls, girls on drugs in cars, and cars on drugs with girls" and then took to shaming his erstwhile showbiz confreres by serving at their tables as a waiter."
