

David Drach

Titles: 1 Sources: 0 Stills: 2

Born: France
Son of director Michel Drach and actress Marie-José Nat

Source: NFT Bulletin Feb/Mar 76

Source: Amazon.com

The Time Out Film Guide review of "LES VIOLONS DU BAL":

"More personal memories of France under the German Occupation in World War II: the director Michel Drach (charmingly played by his son David) was, however, no Lucien Lacombe, ready to accommodate the conqueror, but a wide-eyed Jewish boy who, despite a spell in hiding with the family of a canny, treacherous peasant, was blessed with a handsome, wealthy mother and survived the war with his trusting nature still intact.

"LES VIOLONS DU BAL" comprises episodes in Michel's escape to Switzerland, intercut with semi-humorous scenes of the still-trusting Drach (played as an adult by Trintignant) attempting to finance the film ("When are you shooting the sex scenes?" a fat, pin-headed producer enquires). Drach's earnest confusion about the sort of film he is making does not ultimately diminish these deeply-felt, nostalgic, and often affecting memories."

FILMOGRAPHY

Year	Age	Title	Role
73		LES VIOLONS DU BAL	France, playing his father Michel as a boy, 9 with father and mother, directed by father