The Moving Picture Boy entry:

“This quasi-palindromic child star was graceful and distinguished-looking, and probably son of the actor Josef Peterhans, who was with him in at least two of these films. (There was also a Carl Peterhans.)

He was the little Duke in person, and also the controversial son of the manor (his mother was a servant-girl) in “ZUR CHRONIK VON GRIESHAUS”, a historical melodrama based on a story by Theodor Storm and boasting some of the most impressive sets of its time.

An actor called Hans Peterhans appeared in the 1932 film “THEODOR KÖRNER”. A brief palindrome, but it may have been Hans Peter.”
