The Moving Picture Boy entry:

“Borislav’s father was an engineer and chemist, his mother an economist, so the child was likely to be formidably intelligent. Just as important, from the point of view of his first director and screenwriter, Rangel Vulchanov, he had a marvellously open and expressive face.

As the observing eye of "LACHENITE OBOUVKI" – representing, really, Vulchanov himself as a child in the 1930s – Borislav watches the pomp and revelry of a village wedding, then dreams of imposing village justice on the decadent city.”
