The Moving Picture Boy entry:

"Bobby Winkler (né Winckler, as which he appeared till 1939) had flat fair hair and an obstinate, enthusiastic expression. You could tell he was trouble, as he proved in his most celebrated role as the joy-riding kid in "SULLIVAN'S TRAVELS". But before that he had done masses of screen work, including a few appearances with "Our Gang" and a leading role in the 1939 serial "DAREDEVILS OF THE RED CIRCLE".

After 1943, Bobby hurtled on through a few more films: in the following year "THE ADVENTURES OF MARK TWAIN", "GAMBLER'S CHOICE" and "INCEN-DIARY BLONDE", in 1947 "PRAIRIE EXPRESS" and in 1948 "CRISS CROSS". On the last occasion he was billed as "Robert Winkler", and with this expression of adulthood it seems to have ended. He's not the father of Henry, "the Fonz".
