CVMC video retail/rental website review:

“In this Swedish Tom & Huck-like adventure, two lads roughly twelve and thirteen years old (Stellan Skarsgard) engage in a number of adventures. Vignettes include (1) our heroes being forced to work at a water tower due to some damage they there caused [sic], (2) the townfolks trying their luck at bird fishing and (3) the boys pulling a trick on the local church. Will certainly interest Tom & Huck fans (although there technically does not appear to be a relation between the stories), but bound to be best appreciated by those familiar with the Swedish language. Followed by "BOMBI BITT OCH JAG! – Del 2".

In this half of the Swedish Tom and Huck like series, our young heroes (1) befriend a hermit living in a cave in the woods, (2) observe a heated card game and (3) attend a fair and circus. Will probably interest fans of the Twain stories, but will otherwise be best appreciated by those familiar with its language.

Rated NR: brief/mild violence
Language: Swedish

No further information currently available. Since it's released on video in two volumes, presumably this was originally a Swedish children's TV serial, although it's listed as a film in "The Moving Picture Boy" also.

Buried in the cast list is Hans Lindgren, himself a former boy actor, most notably in "BARNEN FRAN FROSTMOFJALLET" (45), while Stellan Skarsgård (here 17) went on to play the belligerent socialist father tormented by sciatica in "KADISBELLAN" ("Condom Catapult", 93). Nothing else is known of Bjorn Gustafson.
