CVMC video retail/rental website review:

"In this Fighting Kids Production, a boy (Andries Steenkamp) of about twelve is bullied by his peers and won't attempt to defend himself. So, a friend of his sister takes him hunting, where when our young hero stumbles upon some men who have murdered a child he must learn to fight or die himself.

Rated NR: adult themes [sic]; violence; brief/mild profanity
Language: Afrikaans (with English subtitles)

Categories: Action/Adventure, Boy Films, Little to Preteen, Adolescent, Bullies & Teasing, Girl Films, Adolescent, Kidnapping."

No further information currently available. South African films are still something of a rarity on the international scene and have an intrinsic interest for that reason alone. The lethal Afrikaans accent is a hazard, of course, and can fell an ox at three hundred paces. The same video company seems to specialise in tapes featuring amateur boy boxers, wrestlers and judo novices, which makes this a rather peculiar addition to their oeuvre. Nothing else is known of Andries Steenkamp.
