

Un Indien dans la Ville

("An Indian in the City"; aka: "Little Indian, Big City")

France : 1994 : dir. Hervé Palud :

: 90 min

prod: : scr: : dir.ph.:

Ludwig Briand

Thierry Lhermitte; Patrick Timsit; Arielle Dombasle

Ref:	Pages	Sources	Stills	Words	Ω	8	€	M	⚠	Copy on VHS	Last Viewed
5760	-	1	24	250	3	-	-	-	-	No	unseen

"The thing is, son, we call it the Eiffel tower, not the "eyeful tower", so no mountaineering, OK?"

Source for all frame grabs: indeterminate website

Leonard Maltin's Movie and Video Guide
2001 review:

"Dopey French kiddie comedy [sic] about a stockbroker who goes to the Amazon to divorce his estranged wife and discovers he has a 13-year old son whom he brings back to Paris. A big hit in France. Disney released it in the U.S. with terrible American dubbing. Jokes are mainly of the scatological variety: the little kid's name Mimi-Siku means "cat-pee" in his native tongue. Americanised in 1997 as "JUNGLE 2 JUNGLE". *1/2 "

[no listing in "The Critics' Film Guide",
"TV Times Film & Video Guide 1995" or
"Variety Movie Guide 1993"]

No further information currently available. Any nation that could release on the world a film called "THUNDERPANTS", all about a small boy with prodigious farting talents, is in no position to criticise other nations for scatological humour, it seems to me.

See also "BADKONAK-E SEFID" and "BASHU" - both recent Iranian films, and subject index under ARAB WORLD / MIDDLE EAST.