The Australian Film Book 1930-Today
review:

“In South-East Asia scientists discover a boy who has grown up in the jungle, ignorant of the outside world. "LITTLE JUNGLE BOY" is the story of their fight to preserve their find from exploitation by commercial interests.”

Radio Times Guide to Films review:

“The simple but sweet story of a young boy coming to terms with the dangers of ‘civilisation’ after having lived in the Malayan jungle. It’s very predictably mapped out by director Mende Brown, who also produced and wrote this standard Australian adventure. ** ”

Radio Times listing:

“Conclusion of the two-part children’s drama.”

No further information currently available. It doubtless falls flat on its loincloth somewhere between “L’ENFANT SAUVAGE” and “JUNGLE 2 JUNGLE”. Nothing else is known of Rahman Rahman.
