No further information currently available. The fifth of eight known versions to date, an early (live?) TV production, possibly serialised for the Sunday afternoon “culturally improving” slot, starring a 12-year old Richard O'Sullivan, presumably in the title role. He was seen the same year in the historical whimsey “DANGEROUS EXILE”, and as pint-sized comic relief Lawson in the teen-beat school film “IT'S GREAT TO BE YOUNG”. In 1957 he made the hospital soap “NO TIME FOR TEARS”, and had a guest appearance on TV's “The Adventures of Robin Hood”. The source which supplied the “Fauntleroy” credit says he also did a TV production of “Great Expectations” – as Pip? – but can give no year. Five years later he would play a small part in the Sean Scully version of “THE PRINCE AND THE PAUPER” for Disney.
