What's On TV article:

"There was one problem producer Richard Callanan faced when it came to making the Victorian drama "Little Sir Nicholas" - he couldn't find a Little Sir Nicholas! <sup>1</sup> The six-part series, which was first shown two years ago, is set in France and England, so the young leading actor had to speak both French and English. "There aren't that many young actors fluent in French and English" explains Richard, "In the end we made an appeal for a bilingual 10-year old on 'Going Live!'. We auditioned those who came forward and eventually we chose 10-year old Max Beazley."

The series is about the rich English Tremain family, who die at sea while on a voyage to England from France. A distant Tremain cousin is found in 10-year old Gerald (Jonathan Norris), who is set to inherit the family fortune. However the Tremain son Nicholas, played by Max, is found sometime later, alive and well and living in Brittany, France. But when he returns to England to rightfully claim his family's wealth, he discovers that Gerald's greedy family are determined to have the money instead... "

"Period drama serial.

- 1 - A tragic accident leaves a young boy heir to a house on the Cornish cliffs.
- Young Sir Nicholas returns to Cornwall to reclaim his title.
- Nicholas has to overcome his fear of the sea as Christmas approaches. "

TV Quick notes:

- " - Gerald risks all.
- Nicholas's pet pony, one of his only friends, is missing."

No further information currently available. Doubtless a UK/French co-production. Any resemblance to "LITTLE LORD FAUNTLEROY" is sheer coincidence, and should be kept to yourselves. Nothing else is known of Max Beazley or Jonathan Norris, nor is the identity of the actress above.
