Excerpt from Halliwell's Television Companion review of "Make Room for Daddy":

"A Copa Club entertainer has family trouble. Efficient long-running star comedy, later known as "The Danny Thomas Show". It was followed in 1970 by 26 hours of "Make Room for Granddaddy", in colour, but this was not a success."

No further information currently available. These limp attempts to reactivate earlier TV successes almost invariably fail, and most of them reveal themselves with the tag "All New" or "New" (cf "The New Munsters", "The New Leave It To Beaver"). Audience tastes move on, guys, and while we may be nostalgically amused to watch old episodes of "Bewitched", "The Addams Family" or "The Phil Silvers Show", that doesn't equate to a hankering for the old format to be dragged mouldering into the present day and imperfectly cloned.

See the original series "Make Room for Daddy", and subject index under GRANDPARENTS and SITCOMS & SOAPS. It's not known who played the grandchildren here.
