"How d'you separate the men from the boys in a monastery?" – ran an old student rag week joke. "With a crowbar" came the reply. Ah, but student rags don't crack those kind of jokes anymore. Source: Nambla Bulletin vol.13/4

Nambla Bulletin vol.13/4 media note:

"Who in the monastery wins the affections of Marcinello provides the plot line to the new Italian film of the same name. "Homosexuels, s'abstenir", recommends the Paris gay weekly Gai Pied, from which the above photo is taken. Bulletin readers may beg to differ. No word on whether North American distribution is planned, but it opened in Paris April 8th."

No further information currently available. The actor playing the title character is not identified. Orphaned boys raised by nuns or monks were a regular feature in Spanish/Italian melodramas for the home market. See, for instance, the very similar-titled "MARCELINO, PAN Y VINO" (Spain 55) with young Pablito Calvo.

See subject index under RELIGION and presumably ORPHANS / ADOPTION.
