No further information currently available. If only because of their simplicity and familiarity, one might have expected nursery rhymes to be a more popular feature for early cinema than they in fact were. Tales like Aladdin, Cinderella and Snow White crop up regularly enough, but not the Cat and the Fiddle or Little Jack Horner. See also "MOTHER GOOSE IN A SIXTEENTH CENTURY THEATER", from the Edison company in 1912, and the children's TV series "Mother Goose Stories".
