No further information currently available. Earlier the same year a different company had released a period film of the same title – that one in August, this in November – so perhaps this is poking fun as much at a commercial competitor as at the legend itself. What scamps.

See the other "WILLIAM TELL", the children's TV series "The Adventures of William Tell", and subject index under COMEDY and SILENT CINEMA. Gifford does not identify it as a period piece.
